LASER BEAMBAR RGB Laserworld

PRODUCT SPECS :

This special laser effect creates fans of laser beams and can be controlled through DMX or runs in stand-alone or music mode.

The Laserworld BeamBar 10RGB is a bar with 10 single beam laser outlets, each equipped with a 120 mW / 650 nm red, 50 mW / 525 nm green and 80 mW / 450 nm blue laser diode which means it is possible to create millions of colors and white. Each laser beam can be individually aligned through a 4-point alignment system, that can easily be accessed from the front - so no opening of the housing is necessary.

This show laser light provides an analog modulation. It means a better color fading and a much broader color hue. These facts make the Laserworld BeamBar devices ideal for all applications requiring many different color hues and color fadings.

The Laserworld BeamBar 10RGB can be controlled through DMX channels, so each diode can be controlled individually. Thus it's possible to create many different chaser, beam or fan effects.

Due to the standard DMX compatibility, the Laserworld BeamBar 10RGB can easily be integrated into an existing lighting setup.

This laser projector provides a master-slave-mode. Show lasers of the same series (slave projectors), connected via DMX to a main projector (master projector) project the same patterns like the master projector.

XDJ-AZ Alpha Theta

PRODUCT SPECS :

Deze schitterende 4-kanaals standalone DJ controller heeft de layout en gevoel van de welbekende CDJ-3000 en DJM-A9. Zo voel je je direct thuis achter deze controller na het aansluiten. De full-size jogwheels zijn weer precies gemaakt zoals we van deze controllers gewend zijn. Een snelle reactie en gebruiksvriendelijk als het gaat om scratchen en het bedienen van de pitch bend. Doordat de mixer vrijwel gelijk is aan de DJM-A9 zijn alle knoppen precies te vinden waar je ze wilt hebben. De XDJ-AZ maakt jou dus helemaal klaar om te schitteren op de grote festivals en de lokale clubs!

MPT - TOWER PROLYTE

PRODUCT SPECS :

The MPT tower is based on H30V truss and employs a sleeve block that fits to any of the 30 or 40 Series trusses on all four sides by means of bolted CCS6 couplers (either male or female). In combination with an adapter plate, it is also possible to use the sleeve block with either S36R or S36V truss. The MPT tower has a self-weight of 115 kg. The MPT sleeve block is a fully bolted structural element, making it much stronger and more precise than conventional welded versions. The top section and base section can facilitate the use of either a hand winch or a chain hoist. The MPT tower is a cost-effective investment. You need only purchase the special parts if you wish to expand your truss system with towers.

TIPS & TRICKS

Color codes according to length based on color codes of resistors

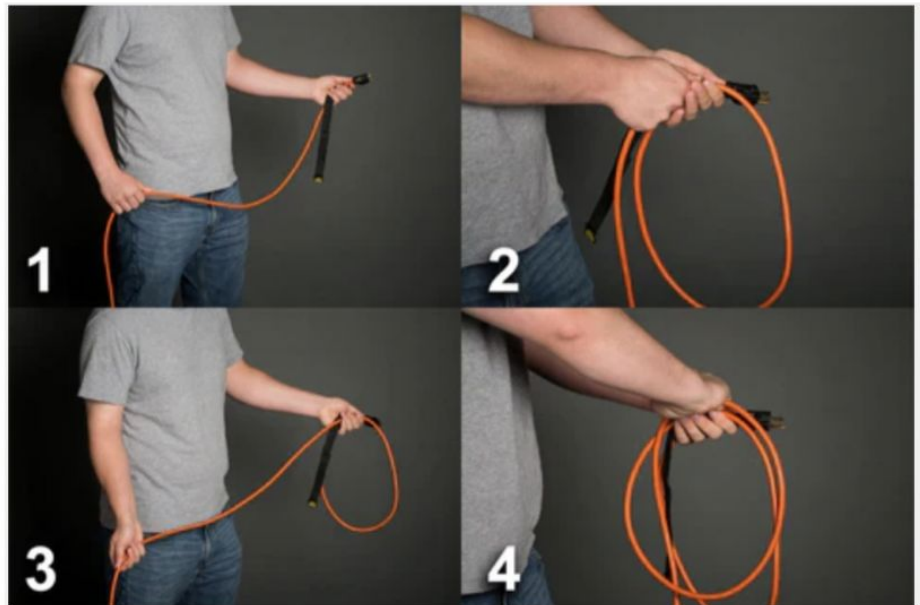

Learn Proper Cable Wrapping Techniques

1. Never pinch your cables. Wrapping instrument cables too tightly is the most common mistake musicians make.
2. Don't tie your cables. Not only can this cause kinks in the cable, it can produce shorts in the wiring itself.
3. There are better options than the "Over the arm" method. While using the "over over" style of cable wrapping is far better than most other options, it can still cause the gradual deterioration of your cables.

Ground loop problems are caused by small voltage differences that normally exist between the 'grounds' at the send and receive ends of a signal cable. In an unbalanced interface (video and consumer audio), this ground voltage difference directly adds to the signal. This generally produces hum or buzz in audio and hum bars in video. In a balanced interface (professional audio), the ground voltage difference may reveal inadequate common-mode rejection at the input stage of the equipment or other design defects. A ground isolator in the signal path is the fundamentally correct way to eliminate system ground loop problems. A transformer does this by magnetically coupling the signal across an electrically insulated barrier.

Temperatuur versus snelheid van geluid

Als we een ultrasoon sensor gebruiken om een object te detecteren of een afstand of niveau te meten, dan willen we natuurlijk dat dit heel nauwkeurig gebeurt. Om dat te kunnen doen, dienen we rekening te houden met variabelen die van invloed kunnen zijn op de werking van de ultrasoon sensor. Zoals temperatuur, snelheid van geluid door lucht, luchtvochtigheid, luchtdruk en de demping van geluid.

Temperatuur heeft de grootste invloed op de snelheid van geluid. De relatie tussen temperatuur en snelheid van geluid is nagenoeg lineair.

Geluid verplaatst zich door lucht (medium) met een snelheid van 344 meter per seconde bij een temperatuur van 20 graden. Wordt het warmer, dan neemt de snelheid van geluid toe. Om dat te compenseren hebben de meeste microsonic ultrasoon sensoren een interne temperatuurcompensatie. Een geïntegreerde temperatuursensor meet de actuele temperatuur en compenseert hierop de gemeten waarde. Dit komt de nauwkeurigheid van de meting ten goede.

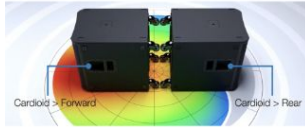

How to correctly position multiple Subwoofers for Cardioid Deployment

By Christophe Anet

To start, let's recall that the low frequency energy radiated from a conventional subwoofer is effectively omnidirectional below 200 Hz. This is because the directivity of a subwoofer is related to the ratio of its size to the length of the sound wave it produces. The length, or size, of the sound wave is inversely proportional to its frequency, and therefore when low frequency waves are much longer than the dimensions of the subwoofer transducer and enclosure, the radiation pattern becomes effectively equal in all directions, including to the sides and rear.

The Directional Cardioid Radiation

Now, as we have all witnessed low frequencies omnidirectional radiation can sometimes be problematic, as it may cause feedback, create bass build up in some part of a room or disturb neighbors. Since the late 50's sound engineers have setup subwoofer's array using a minimum of two units, and with careful adjustments of delay, polarity, output levels and distance between the units, they managed to force the radiated energy to become directional. So, the term cardioid radiation – or heart-shaped – refers to the shape of the directional coverage in which levels are louder at the front of the unit and quieter behind it.

To implement such a cardioid radiation, two technical solutions can be used. Either design a fully cardioid subwoofer that features both front and rear-firing drivers within the same enclosure, or employ two separate standard subwoofers together with on-board pre-programmed DSP presets that will provide either forward- or rear-facing radiation for each unit. Working together the two units (more than two can be used, as we will discuss later) will combine to produce a cardioid radiation pattern with up to 15 dB of rearward rejection.

Cardioid Deployments

So, if two, or more, subwoofers can be arranged and configured to produce a cardioid radiation pattern very simply without complex calculations or processing settings required, a question we should answer is how to correctly position such a subwoofer array to get the best possible cardioid performance? The processing necessary for cardioid operation is already programmed into each subwoofer's DSP. On each subwoofer facing forward (toward the audience), the cardioid preset called 'Forward' should be selected and on each unit facing away from the audience, the preset 'Rear' should be turned on. Then, the same audio signal should be fed into both subwoofers with the same gain setting on each one.

The question is now how to physically position the subwoofers on the stage, or nearby floor surface. There are three possible deployments, and the choice is very dependent on the stage and venue layout, where the audience is in relation to the stage, the possible masking of video projections, etc.

A Good Choice: Side-by-Side

Placing subwoofers side-by-side may save space and allow good visibility of the stage for the audience, but creates a cardioid pattern with limited precision.

A Better Solution: Stacked

Stacking two subwoofers on top of each other offers similar results to the side-by-side arrangement. Of course, this setup clears the floor space, which is often beneficial in small venues.

The Best Option: Back-to-Back

Placing subwoofers back-to-back offers the best cardioid performance, with 15 dB of sound attenuation at the rear of the array. The venue, or stage, should allow for such an arrangement, as it requires a little larger footprint.

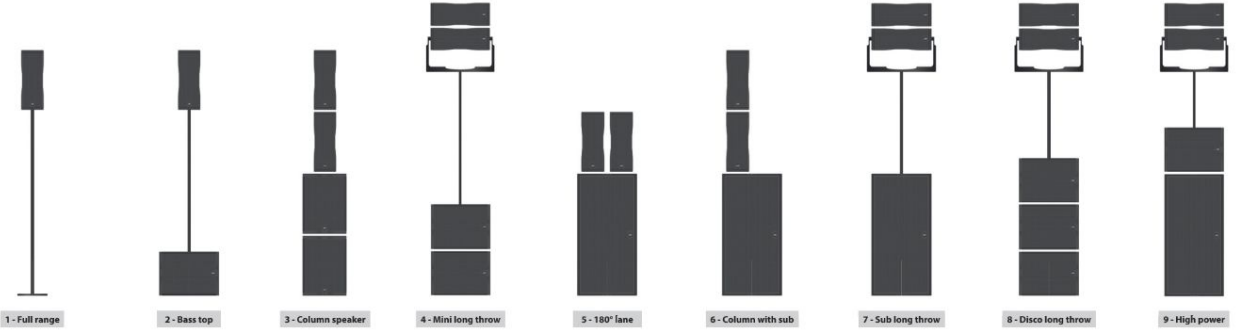

Three Subwoofers Cardioid Arrangements

A three subwoofers configuration, with two forward facing and one rear-facing units, provides additional acoustic output at the front but with slightly less efficient rear attenuation. Once again, the stacked arrangement is less optimal than the back-to-back option.

Formules en vermogens - 240V stopcontacten.

1,5 mm² - max.3500W

Verdeelkasten op evenementen beschikken meestal over 16 of 20 Ampere stopcontacten.

Je kan dus meestal minimaal 3840W op een kring aansluiten, echter moet er goed opgelet worden want de meeste verdeelstekkers die op de markt circuleren kunnen maar max.3500W verdragen en hebben een vaste kabel van maar 1,5 mm².

Voorbeeld :

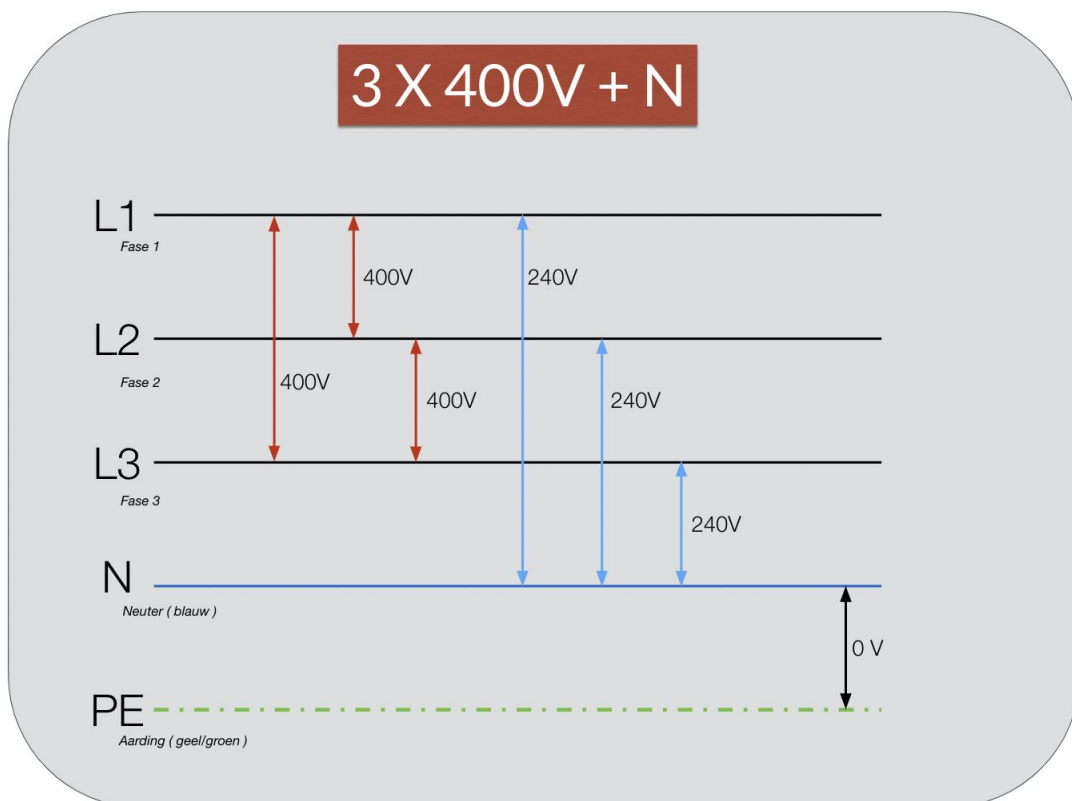

$$240V \times 16A = 3840W$$

draadsectie : 1,5 mm²

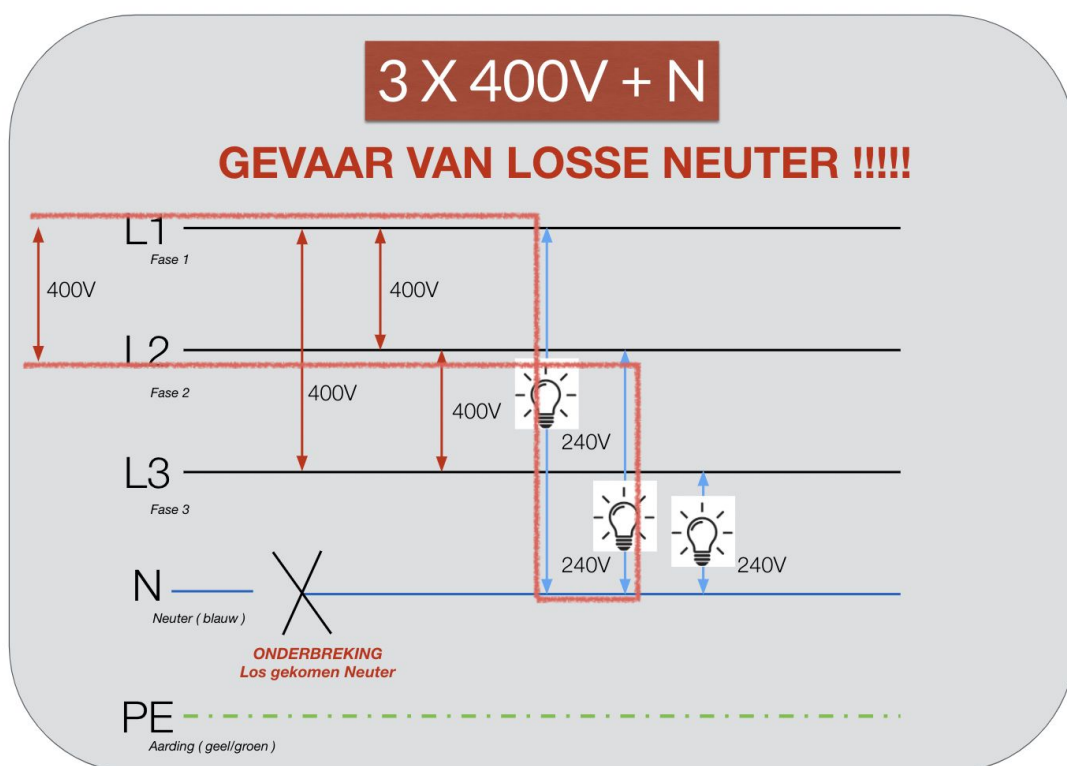

$$240V \times \mathbf{20A} = 4800W$$

draadsectie : 2,5 mm²
